LIQUOR RAID APPROVED.

Law Enforcement League of Lexington Will Continue to Wage War on Rum -Work of Committee, Selectmen and Police Strongly Endorsed.

The first no-license gun in Lexington was fired Tuesday evening at the meeting of the Citizens' Law Enforcement society, which held its annual meeting at Cary hall. There was an attendance of about 30, and everyone seemed to be nthusiastic in the work of keeping the own in the no-license column for another year. Rev. Charles F. Carter, the president, was in the chair. Secretary Henry H. Putnam read a summary of the work of the society during the past year, giving a brief history of its organization and the result it accomplished at the town meeting last year as evifenced by the tremendous growth of the to vote. The report endorsed the police department and the work of the sub committees of the society. Treasurer George W. Spaulding gave a report of the finances showing a balance in the treasury of $8.60.

The report of the law enforcement committee of three was read by Edwin A. Bayley. It gave a history of the way and manner in which the committee had co-operated with the selectmen and police department in seeing to it that the liquor law was enforced. He said the committee, when it started on its work, learned of rumors which alleged one man had made $243 during one day by the lilegal sale of liquor, and that during a year's time he had made $3000. In March the committee cautioned the druggists to be careful to live up to the letter of the law and asked their cooperation in the enforcement of it. The next move was a meeting with the selectmen, who immediately notified the police to enforce the liquor law to the letter and promised to back up the officers in all that they did. Proprietors of alleged "joints" were then warned by the selectmen that all violations of law would be prosecuted.

On April 19, Patriot's day, the committee made a tour of the town to ascirtain if any illegal sales were in progress, and at one place the bar room was in full operation, and two Lexington ladds in addition to the regular force were employed to attend to the thirsty ines. The next day the proprietor was invited to a conference with the committee was shen warned to be careful or prosecution would follow, and the committee and the result was he promised to respect the law in the future. Another place was then warned to be careful or prosecution would follow, and the committee and the result was he promised to respect the law in the future. Another place was then warned to be careful or prosecution would rollow, and the committee and the result was he promised to respect the law in the future. Another place was then warned to be committee, and the result was a good example to follow, the wanded all committee which have transpired during the past year. It was signed ing the past year was a great benefit to the town.

Robert P. Clapp moved that the committee's report be printed in full for distribution, and this was carrid.
Rev. Mr. Staples again took the floor to say that he had heard there was to be an attempt to carry Lexington for license this year, and wanted everyone to be on the alert. Mr. Bayley said if license was voted, there would not be the same consideration shown violators of the law that has been shown during the past year.
The following officers were then elected by ballot: President. Charles F. Carter: vice-presidents. Albert S. Parsons, Robert P. Clapp. L. D. Cochrane; secretary Henry H. Putnam; treasurer, George W. Spaulding; executive committee, Carlton A. Staples. C. A. Currier. A. F. Hutchinson, Alfred Picrce, Timothy O'Connor, George O. Whiting, William Hunt. Edward P. Merram, Forest A. W. Seventy-Five Years Reviewed by Six Years Are Sufficient in Which to George Y. Wellington-Arlington Historical Society Enjoys Reminiscences by Its President.

An unusually interesting meeting was held Tuesday evening, in Pleasant hall, by the Arlington Historical society. President George Y. Wellington gave an informa: talk before a large audience, on the subject, "As I Remember." In his introductory, Mr. Wellington took his hearers back from the telephone and telegraph of today, and from the electric and steam cars, to the horse car, the omnibus and the stage coach, covering his seventy-five years of life. The speaker related in a pleasant way how, when or company of Booton entertainment people and the company of Booton entertainment people are the season of the company of Booton entertainment people are the season of the company of Booton entertainment people are the season of the company of Booton entertainment people are the season of the company of Booton entertainment people are the season of the company of Booton entertainment people are the season of the season he was a boy, the stage made three trips a week to and from Boston, and then later on came the horse car with its fare eighteen cents to Boston. A LIVE EXPRESS.

Build Up a Large Business-J. H. Edwards, of Arlington, Keeps His Teams Moving Early and Late.

One of the youngest business men in Arlington, and one of the best known, is J. H. Edwards, the proprietor of Johnson's Arlington express. Although coming to Arlington a perfect stranger six years ago, without anyone upon whom he could rely except himself, Mr. Edwards has shown what a man can do by hard work and perseverance. His success is evidenced by the amount of business done every day, and by the wonderful growth in the six years he has had it in charge. From three horses used in expressing when he began business, he now has eleven constantly on the road; instead of one double wagon, he now has three, and instead of a single wagen, three, and instead of a single wagen, he now runs five. Two men were then employed, while now six are required to attend to the increasing demand.

Mr. Edwards was born on Prince Edward island, Feb. 13, 18/6, where he lived during his early boyhood and where he learned the carpenter's trade. He came to Brockton when he was 19 years old, and worked there a year at his trade. Leaving Brockton he came to Arlington and for a few months was connected with the Cambridge Ice company. He then entered the employ of H. W. Johnson, who was the proprietor of Johnson's express, and after a time became so familiar with every detail of the business that two and a half years later, when Mr. Johnson decided to sell out the business, Mr. Edwards naturally was the one to buy. Mr. Johnson then returned to Berwick, Me., his native home, where he has since lived. Mr. Edwards then set about building up the business, as he saw what he believed to be a good chance to do so, and subsequent events have proven that he took advantage of the opportunity which was presented. For about three months after buying out the business, Mr. Edwards remained in the single state, but only for about three months. He married Miss Mary A. Foohey, of Arlington Dec. 7, 1898, and since that event a son, John R. Edwards, has been added to the family circle.

The express business, which is carried on between Arlington and Boston, keeps all the men and teams busy handling the goods delivered daily. All of the teams go into Boston except one which is kept in Arlington to attend to jobbing, furniture and piano moving. Two trips are made into the Hub, one at 9 o'clock and one at noon, returning at 2 and 7 p.m.

in Arlington to attend to jobbing, furnature and piano moving. Two trips are made into the Hub, one at 9 o'clock and one at noon, returning at 2 and 7 p.m.. Boxes in Arlington are statismed at the town hall, corner of Jason street and Massachusetts avenue, corner Cleveland street and the avenue, corner Henderson street and the avenue, corner Park and Massachusetts avenues, and at Rowe's store, Arlington Heights. The Boston offices, which have been doubled in number since Mr. Edwards came into control, are located at 34 Court square, 65 Pearl street, 15 Devonshire street, 174 Washington street, 36 Merchants' row, 93 and 97 Arch street, 14 Devonshire street and 14 Nashua street, with boxes at Faneuil Hall and Surfolk markets. Although Mr. Edwards has but little time to devote to affairs outside his business, he is a member of the Arlington Traders' association, and is deeply interest the town. His prompthess and energy Traders' association, and is deeply interested in all that pertains to the welfare of the town. His promptness and energy have given him a reputation which could not be attained in any other way, and the growing business proves that he has earned that reputation. He is con-

DIRECTIONS ON THE ROAD.

Where is that man who has not more han once been misled by the directions he has received while making his way along the road? In the first place, most men of whom one inquires as he journeys along in an unknown country are so inaccurate in their statements, and such incompetent judges of distances, that the traveler knows less of his whereabouts after his inquiry than he did before. In answer to your query 'How shall I get to a certain point?' the reply will come much after this fashion: You keep right on this main road until you come to a large, red barn where you will find a highway turning to your left. Don't take that road, for it leads just where you don't want to go, but keep right on this main road until you pass a large oak tree. That tree my grandfather set out when he vas but a boy. Well, a little beyond this tree, you will come to the fork of two roads. These you are to pass by, and continue on until you reach a residence painted white. There's where the widow Brown lives. Passing the widow Brown's house, you take your first righthand road, and then at a distance of half a mile beyond, you'll find the road bends a little, but never mind that; keep right on until you come to the meeting-house in the square; then, pushing along, leaving the meeting-house on your left, take your first right-hand road, which will take you to the town you have in view. And then your voluminous informant tells you that the distance is about three miles. Muddled now, as you must be, concerning the way, you travel along for a distance of a mile or more, when you inquire again and you find, somewhat to your amazement, that your objective point is four miles distant, and, besides, you learn that you are on the wrong road. There isn't one man in ten who will intelligently direct the traveler. We remember a funny happening which came by way of the inquiry, "Which road shall I take?" A friend of ours some years ago was teaching school in a building situated at the junction of two roads. A high wind had blown the guide board from the post occupying the little space between the two roads, so the teacher picked up the guide-board and put it in the hallway of the schoolhouse. Soon after, a stranger made his appearance at the school building and asked the teacher which road he should take. The teacher at once replied. "Step right into the hallway here, where I have a guide board which will tell you all about it.' Ridiculous as this story may seem, the teacher's direction was nearly, if not quite, as intelligent and accurate as that which one gets in a majority of instances along the highway.

The better way when traveling is to trust to providence and your pocketcompass and ask no questions.

SLEIGH RIDING.

Sleigh riding, with the music of the bells, and a pretty girl beside you, is the climax of enthusiastic enjoyment.

To glide through the air is to make believe that one has wings, and this fancied belief is emphasized by the fair young damsel who sits close beside you as you make your way o'er hill and dale to the jingle of the bells. Talk as Butter and Eggs, one may, yet sentiment has its place in this matter-of-fact world of ours. We one may, yet sentiment has its place in wouldn't give a straw for that boy who has no poetry in his soul. That lad and lassie well robed and snugly tucked in in the same cutter behind a two-forty roadster are the happy translation of the prosy side of life. To them, the widening landscape, under its mantle of snow, is prophetic of their future. The moon shines for them alone. And then the sweet things that are said during a moonlit sleigh ride, who can number them! Yes, we believe in the sleigh ride, and more than once have we regretted during the past few days that we were not young again, so that we might ake some maiden in her teens and together skim the air. But as it is, it has been a real pleasure to us to note the fun and enjoyment our young people have had during the almost perfect sleighing of the past two weeks. Arlington, Lexington and Belmont have literally been on runners. The popular song of late has been, "O'er the snow

> That the Arlington Heights Park Avenue Congregational church persisted in adding to the Rev. John G. Taylor's salary $200, in spite of Mr. Taylor's advice to the contrary, very clearly indicates the high esteem in which the pastor of the Park Avenue Congregational church and his family are held.

There is no more exhilarating pastime to the man who uses his brain excessively than that of pool playing. It furnishes a radical change from the routine of constant thinking in regular channels for it brings into use a diversity of thoughts entirely foreign thereto and therefore recreative in character. Besides, it affords much wholesome physical exercise otherwise. Our pool-room at No 491 Mass. Ave., Arlington, is a retreat for those who would, for a brief time, drive dull care away. SHAKESPEARE OR BACON?

"Whether Bacon wrote the wonderful plays or not, I am quite sure the man Shakespeare neither did, nor could." In words so unequivocal as these did our Whittier repudiate the Shakespearean authorship of the Shakespeare plays. In the columns of the London Times, show him to have been a man who, as Whittier said, "neither did nor could"

write them, and that the only man live ing at the time of their publication who could was Francis Bacon. And the

Let us look at the facts for a moment

Shakespeare, at 21 or 23, left Stratford and went to London. There is evidence that he was absolutely uneducated, without friends, without position, without money. He made his living at first by helding horses at the doors of the theatre, and in time became an actor.

There is no evidence that he ever travelled or owned a book, or wrote a letter or a scrap of manuscript; and the only five autographs known to be authentic are illegible scrawls, so unalike that it is presumed he copied or traced them.

His daughter Judith, living to be a woman of mature years, never knew how to write her name. There is no creditable thing recorded of Shakes-praise him for a creditable act of any kind, and such record of his life as exists all goes to show that he was a person of low character, of low associations, and of dissolute life, and that his death resulted from a drunken bout.

To have written these plays, their author must have known Greek and Latin, Italian, French and Spanish liters

AT A SAVINGS BANK.

Why a Man Who Was In a Hurry Did Not Make a Deposit.

The business man who was in a hurry was standing in line at the savings bank waiting his turn to deposit. There was only one person ahead of him, and he was congratulating himself upon this good luck. The person ahead was a wo man, and when the business man arrived she was just opening negotiations with the receiving teller.

"Now, I want to open accounts," she began, "for some little nieces and nephews of mine. It's for a present, you know," confidentially, "and I'm only going to put $5 in each book. Of course that isn't much, but"- Here the teller endeavored to get down to the business details, but in vain. "If they're real saving, as I want them to be, they'll soon make it more. Lots of rich men started

"Yes, yes, madam," interrupted the teller in desperation; "of course they did. Now, what are these children's names and ages?

"Why, there's Fannie, my namesake, she's nine-no, maybe it was eight her last birthday. What? Oh, her full name? Frances Jane, of course. How stupid of me! And then Johnnie-no, John William, named after an uncle that died. He's six and just as cute as he can be. You wouldn't believe what that child"-

"Yes, I would, madam, but please be as brief as possible and omit everything but business. Are there any more children?"

"Oh, yes. There's the baby, Mildred. She's ten months old, and I thought she seemed pretty young to have a bankbook all to herself, so I'd like to take one for her and her mother together. Her mother's only my brother's sister-in-law, but she's just like an own sister to me. What? I can't do that? Well, that's funny, but you fix it according to the rules, about law and medicine and history and of course.'

The business man, who had at first glared savagely at the loquacious depositor, now shifted wearily from one leg to the other and began to show signs of col-

HINTS FOR MOTHERS.

All children, girls as well as boys, should be taught self reliance. Children should be taught to sing simple and sweet songs about the house.

Children should be taught to say "Thank you" as soon as they can speak. A baby should never be frightened by stories told by an ignorant or thoughtless greatest man who had ever lived. This Good literature that is interesting and adaptable to the small minds should be plentifully supplied for the children.

A child may be made gentle or rough according to the manners and actions of those about him, for his greatest desire is said, in 1623. Prior to 1620, Johnson went on record as disapproving of Shakes-

A child should be taught to gargle as early as possible and should never be allowed to be "stubborn" about taking medicine, for disobedience in this respect is not infrequently a risk of life.

Children should be given a light supper of bread and milk at 5 o'clock and put to bed at 6 or a little later until they are five years old. After that time their bedtime may be fixed at 7 for several years. Every precaution should be taken to keep a child in the best of health. A sickly, peevish baby is a constant care and anxiety, but when healthy and well trained it is easy for the little one to ! happy and good.

The Cat and the Kid.

Once upon a time a cat and a kid were Johnson published a work consisting of traveling in company and stopped in front of a window of a store to admire a miscellaneous display of merchandise.

"Doesn't it make you sad," asked the cat, "to see those kid gloves? Just think, that may be the condition of your skin some day!"

Not alone does he own this distinction from his official duties, but his personality in private and more social life is marked to no small degree. Born under the French flag, Mr. Kauffmann, when he was 14 years old, came to the United States, and from that moment he has been intensely American even to the extent of fighting for nearly three years to maintain the supremacy and unity of the nation he had learned to love.

Mr. Kauffmann was born March 18, 1843. In the city of Strasbourg, now called Strassburg, in the province of Elass in Prussia. At the time of his birth the French had dominion over the territory. His father was a German and his mother was a French lady. The elder Kauffmann, who had become a French citizen, identified himself with the Republicans of France and was a prominent business man. With the restoration of royalty he was made a captive, in 1852 and was banished to a French colony in South America by Napoleon III. He remained in exile for twenty-three long years and would have been kept there for life but for the German government, who demanded the release of all political prisoners who were former residents of the Prussian soil which had again become German territory.

His wife and children supposed him to be dead, and when, in January. 1875, Mr. Kauffmann, of Lexington, received a letter from his mother stating that the husband and father was alive and was soon to meet his son in America, it seemed almost like a reappearance from the tomb. All the prespective of the control of the tomb. soon to meet his son in America, it seemed almost like a reappearance from the tomb. All the property of the elder Kauffmann having been confiscated by the French government he had no financial reasons for remaining in the old world, and as he desired to again breathe 'the free air,' he soon came to the United States, where he passed his remaining days, never caring to return to the land which had caused him so many bitter and cruel years of suffering. Charles G. Kauffmann, leaving his native soil in 1857, started for America and was on the sea for forty-two days in a sailing vessel. He came alone and had no relatives or friends here except an uncle who lived in New York. From the moment he arrived in the United States, he never had any desire to return but for the one desire to see his aged mother, who would not agree to come to America. Young Kauffmann began work as a journeyman cigar maker, and continued at the trade until the Civil war broke out. In August, 1862, he enlisted in Co. E. 158th N Y. and served faithfully until the close of the war. He was engaged in North Carolina and Virginia in the Army of the James, and fought in a large number of engagements, among them being Drury's Bluff. Bermue a Hundred Chathe war. He was engaged in North Carolina and Virginia in the Army of the James. and fought in a large number of engagements, among them being Drury's Bluff Bermuda Hundred Chapin's Farm. Richmond, Petersburk and Appomattox. He enlisted as a private, but in three months he was made a mon-commissioned officer, was appointed third sergeant, then second sergeant and first sergeant, and then rose to the position of second lieutenant. On two occasions was he wounded, the first time being knocked insensible from the bursting of a shell while stationed behind a "bomb proof." The second time he was wounded by a ball in the calf of the leg while engaged in a charge upon Fort Gregg. Upon his discharge from the service he went to Brooklyn. N. Y., where he married Miss Mary Frances Thomas. They are parents to four children, Carric A., Ernest G., Mary Frances and Florence H. Kauffmann.

In 1867, Mr. Kauffmann left New York and came to Boston, where he entered the employ of D. S. Brown & Co. Here he remained for two years, when he came to Lexington, where he has since lived, although during ten intervening years he had charge of another Boston factory. Mr. Kauffmann is now engaged in the manufacture of cigars at his shop in East Lexington, and the Old Belfry and the Blue Bird brands have more than a local reputation for being a choice and fragrant smoke. He also makes other brands for special customers, and his business is constantly growing.

Fraternal organizations have always found Mr. Kauffmann a willing and enthusiastic worker. He is a past master of Simon W. Robinson lodge, F. & A. M.; past commander of George S. Mead post, G. A. R.; has served on the staff of the national commander of the G. A. R.; and a prominent member of Independence lodge, A. O. U. W. For two years he was assistant chief of the Lexington fire department, served a short term on the school committee, and is now chairman of the board of assessors, although this is his first year on that important board. Mr. Kauffmann is also prominently mentioned thi ber of engagements, among them being

All his life Mr. Buckley has been a student of the great public questions of the day, and in his views on them he has been a consistent Democrat, believing in the success of that party in nation, state and city. He has been speaker of the Boston Young Men's Congress, where he always took an active and a prominent part in the debates. He is by no means in the class of the professional politicians, for he has never tried for public office nor received a political appointment, but this has not prevented him from taking the keenest interest in political affairs and from giving his time and the best of his endeavors to the success of the party in whose principles he believes.

the success of the party in whose principles he believes.

It is in Cambridge, especially that this interest in politics which Mr. Buckley has in strong measure has come into play. Going there a comparative stranger, little more than seven years ago, he soon affiliated himself with the local Democracy, and studying acutely its actions and policies, he came to a clear understanding of its needs. He has done much to build the party up in ward 5, where, largely by his efforts, it has been raised from the position of an important minority to that of a strong, united body, lacking less than 70 votes of carrying the ward in the late mayoralty campaign. He has been two years chairman of the ward's Democratic committee.

But it is in the city at large that he has found the widest field for his efforts. He was one of the pioneers in the movement for drawing party lines in the municipal elections in this city, and so contributed very much to the result of the recent election in which John H. H. McNamee was triumphantly swept into the mayor's chair. At the public meeting last spring, which the Democrats held to consider the party line question, Mr. Buckley came out strongly and definitely in favor of the proposed change of party policy and delivered a carefully prepared speech which was virtually the ground work of the Democratic case in the recent election. In it he referred to the great growth of the public debt unthe recent election. In it he referred to the great growth of the public debt un-der the non-partisan administration, to the inequality of the assessments, and to the extravagant expenditure of the the inequality of the assessments, and to the extravagant expenditure of the people's money.

Mr. Buckley is a firm believer in the power of organization. He does not want the kind that discourages independent political thinking or the kind that brings about the control of a corrupt political boss. But he does want that organization which will keep the party workers awake and interested throughout the year so that when the campaign comes the whole party will be in fighting trim.

As a trained observer of political conditions, he thinks that the election this last December was but a skirmish compared with the desperate struggle which is sure to come next year. So the Bryan club has elected as its president a keen observer, a hard worker, and an enthusiastic, unselfish supporter of the party principles, who will leave no stone unturned by honest means to promote its triumph.

THE SCRAP-BOOK.

The help and worth of the scrap-book should be early impressed upon the children. There is no better way of teaching history than in making it. The mcrap-book is not only a collection of selected facts or paragraphs, but, if properly kept, it will become the history of its individual possessor, and, besides, its worth increases with the year. It would be of immense advantage to the boys and girls in the family and in the public schools if the children were required to write down each day some fact gathered from their reading or some thought of their own. So we advise the boys and girls to purchase a scrap-book and write in it each day.

THREE LIVE TOWNS.

That Arlington, Lexington and Belmont are three live towns is a historical fact. Situated conveniently near the metropolis, they enjoy all the advantages of the city without sacrificing any of the privileges of country life.

Lexington, with its Green and monument, is simply bubbling over with history, while Belmont is distinguished for being one of the most attractive localities in the state, as well as the richest, with a population noted for its intelligence. Arlington, the last of the trio, but not the least, is known far and wide for its delightful situation, for its excellent roads and for its schools and judges, but the grandest truth relating to these three towns is the fact that they take and read the Enterprise.

THAT EVENING SCHOOL.

That evening school, concerning which a paragraph was published in the En--terprise last week, ought to meet with much favor in Arlington. The evening schoo's in our cities and larger towns have been productive of much good There is many a one employed throughout the day who could devote two or three hours of arr evening to study under competent teachers, and the good coming therefrom would be two-fold, In the first place, the pupil would gain valuable information, and then again he would be all the better fitted for his ordinary work of the day. There is many an evening wasted and worse than wasted. Why not make good use of the spare hours? The Arlington evening school will speak well for the

"SKATE SLOW."

"Skate slow" is the suggestive advice that ex-United States Senator David B. Hill, of New York, gives to the National Democracy, advice that he might have given to the business and society world as well. The difficulty with the most of us is that we are ambitious to ily when it would be the better plan to walk. You business man should not make your way so rapidly that you cannot readily count the mile posts along the road. And you society woman should not be so ambitious to become a leader of the "Four Hundred," as not to take in your surroundings. Do what we may, and say what we will, we are all bound to find our limit at last. "Skate slow" if you would avoid a break-neck tumble. To keep well on your feet, you need to take step by step. Do not forget that "the longest way round is the shortest way home." Take your time, and so "skate

GROWING OLD GRACEFULLY.

Joshua G. Dodge, of Arlington, who was 89 years old Tuesday, Jan. 28; is growing old gracefully. We called at his home Tuesday afternoon to extend our personal congratulations and the congratulations of the Enterprise. found Mr. Dodge reading one of the latest magazines. In answer to the query, "How do you do?" he replied, "I have never felt better." With excellent eyesight, and free from the usual attendant discomforts of growing age, he is in a logical way enjoying life. Mr. Dodge, of whom we wrote at length in an issue of the Enterprise during the past summer, has lived and is living the life of a philosopher. It is always delightful to meet him, and always instructive to listen to his agreeable conversation. Of extended reading he always has something to say. Mr. Dodge's many years are so many certificates of noble living. That there are yet many years remaining to him is the wish of his army of friends.

A TWISTED VISION.

There are those who have an inverted or twisted vision-those who never see things in their true proportions. Mutually they are either near-sighted or farsighted. At times they think themselves within touch of that which is almost infinitely beyond their grasp, so they are more or less frequently reaching out for the impossible. The man with an inverted vision sees things topsy-turvy. He loses his bearings because he has no unvarying compass to guide him. His judgment isn't worth a straw because there is to him no law of proportion. To see things as they are comes from a well balanced mind. The man who is mentally cross-eyed is to be avoided. T see "men as trees walking" is far pre ferable to seeing them with their fee in the air. There should arise some in tellectual oculist who could set the mind's eye aright. There is little sympathy to be had for those whose brains are all akin. To look along normal lines is the only way an object can be seen in its just relations. To size up the world one must first get at the size of the man who looks out upon it. A distorted vison means a distorted universe. The stars are in the heavens above only to him who looks upward.

"I DON'T KNOW."

That man is greatly to be respected who has the courage and honesty to say I don't know" when such is the fact. he man who knows it all, and so is never at a loss to give an affirmative inswer, is that man upon whose anther ity one cannot safely rely. Life is not ong enough to learn and know everyhing. Walking encyclopaedias are not found on every corner of the streets. It is your wordy man who knows the whole tusiness. It is refreshing to meet him or her who will tell you without apology 'I don't know." The man who doesn't cnow is a learner. To him the world s an open book. He isn't ashamed to acknowledge that he is in search of truths that are yet unknown to him. don't know" is the confession that leads to that repentance which results in a second intellectual birth. The man who doesn't know it is always ready to rise for prayers and make his way to the anxious seat." There is need right here in Arlington, Lexington, Belmont and lsewhere, such a revival in all intellec ual pursuits, that will leave your know t-all shaking in his shoes. The fact is he great ocean of truth is as yet all un discovered, so he alone is the student who admits that he has vet kis lesson to learn. Don't be afraid to say I don't

DOES CIVILIZATION PROMOTE HAPPI-NESS?

The above query was asked the other day by one of the leading citizens of Arlington, with an accentuation very plainty indicating that his reply to the question would be "no" were he to state himself in unmistakable English. Well, we freely admitted there may be two sides to the question with the evidence, nowever, mostly on the side of the af irmative. On first thought it might apear that the earlier primitive life was the happier. It is not a little restful to meet one who literally takes no thought of the morrow. There is many a man who, keeping himself apart from the world, seems absolutely contented-who seems to care for nothing, and who wants nothing. Who can be happier, it may be asked, than the namadic tribes What greater contentment can come to one, than that which the "tramp" en joys? There is a negative form of happiness which puts one to sleep, but which s not happiness after all. On the other hand it is death. The real happy man can only be found in a living world. throbbing with life. There is any amount of satisfaction in trying to keep up with the procession. There is no pleasure it being left. This don't-care way of livng is hardly less than annihilation. Happiness must consist in knowing and doing. The vital forces must be lined up for action on call. Civilization calls out the best there is in a man. This proves itself true both with the individual and with the nation. The man who has a hand-to-hand fight with the sharp com petitions of a busy, active life, oftentimes imagines that quiet and a restful haplness would be his were he not comelled to measure himself by other men, while as a matter of fact, his greatest happiness is secured by outdoing in his neighbor in all legitimate ways. The highest and noblest action comes from intellectual and moral development, and his development rests upon that enarged capacity which may take in God's mmeasureable universe. There can be no enduring happiness outside that universal law which is in harmony with that knowledge which takes in that suhand-to-hand with the sharp competi-Civilization surely does promote happi-

MISSED HIS HENS.

Last week Friday William W. Sullivan, of 1140 Massachusetts avenue, Arlington Heights, reported to the police that 50 valuable hens had been taken from his hen coop during the day and desired the assistance of the officers in finding them. hen coop during the day and desired the assistance of the officers in finding them. Officer Duffy was at once detailed on the case, and after hearing all there was to hear from the members of the family, formed some suspicions which were later confirmed. It appeared that Mr. Sullivan, who is married, lives with his father-in-law, who has a wife and son, the latter being about 17 years of age. Young Barrett was left in charge of the place Friday while the other members of the family went to Boston to the theatre. The hens were all right when the family departed, but upon their return the biddies were missing. Young Barrett was questioned as to his knowledge of the affair, but claimed ignorance of the mysterious disappearance. The next day Officers Duffy and Irwin went to Boston in hopes of locating the birds, but were unable to do so. They discovered, however, that young Barrett had spent considerable money Friday evening and the next morning, and he was later charged with selling the hens to some dealer. He denied the charge flatly, but Sunday he was missing, and his father agreed to settle for the hens by paying the apprised value to his son-in-law. Young Barrett left town in company with another young man, so it is claimed.

BAD GASH IN HEAD. Winthrop Sullivan, the five-year-old son of Edward Sullivan, of 7 Park terrace, had a bad fall Tuesday while in the home of Edmund W. Harvey of 5 Park terrace. The little fellow had been playing in the house, and at the time of the accident was standing on a chair. In some way he fell over backward and struck the back of his head against one of the chair rockers, cutting a deep gash. The wound bled profusely, and there was a hustle for surgical assistance, Dr. Stickney was called and was obliged to put in two stitches in closing up the gash. No had effects, however, attended the accident.

THE ENTERPRISE IS FOR SALE IN LEXINGTON BY: H. V. Smith, Lexington.

HITTING THE WRONG END.

It will be interesting to people in this section of the state to follow the progress of the bill recently introduced in the senate, which provides that town treasurers shall be ineligible to serve for more than five years continuously. Should the bill become a law, Lexington will lose its excellent town treasurer, George D. Harrington, who will complete his fifth year of service this spring. Should the law be passed after the March town meetings it will prevent re-elections of the five year men on the year following. The bill is the progeny of Senator B. Williams, of Cochituate, in the town of Wayland, who represents the Fifth . Middlesex district, of which Lexington is a part. Lexington is somewhat disturbed at the prospect of losing its treasurer, although there are many doubts expressed as to the success of the bill. It appears to many, and the belief seems to be well founded, that while the purpose of the bill is a good one, the method proposed is unsound. Mr. Williams believes by his plan the danger of large defalcations would be immeasurably lessened and thus by preventing towns from giving a man a life tenure in office it would place a restraint n the temptations of a treasurer. Doubtless the object would be partly accomplished by such an enactment, although in five years a treasurer might speculate with the town funds if he were disposed to do so. In the majority of cases where the treasurers are men of strict honesty it would seem that the enactment would work a hardship, not only for the official who may have depended on the salary for a livelihood, but on the town which desires to benefit from the experience of a trusted and tried servant. It would seem on the whole as though Mr Williams was cutting off the rooster's tall instead of its heid. The whole trouble in these financial disturbances in the towns where the treasurers have gone astray lies in the method of auditmg accounts rather than in the tenure of office of the treasurer. Auditing accounts in the majority of towns, and we speak advisedly, is a makeshift at the best, and in many it is absolutely ridiculous and the town auditor, who is seldom an expert, after a few hours' staring at a mass of figures, adds up the columns, finds the total correctly stated, signs his name and draws his salary. And then people wonder at defalcations! That there is a need of some law is plainly apparent, but let the law hit the auditor instead of the treasurer. It might be well for auditors to be appointed by the governor to examine the town books in the same manner as bank examiners go at their work, or the postoffice inspectors perform their duties. By so doing the towns could be assured of expert auditing which but few towns have at the present day. This is not necessarily the only plan, but might well be considered; but to remove an official after five years without any other cause would seem as absurd as to remove cashiers and postmasters after serving a Imited term in their positions.

However, Mr. Williams may be able to present another phase of the situation, but until then the Enterprise must ad here to the position taken.

TAYLOR WILL RUN.

George W. Taylor announced to an Enterprise man, yesterday afternoon, that he was to be a candidate for selectman at the spring election. His announcement was not unexpected, for his friends have been talking it ever since the memorable campaign of last year. There is yet no candidate who has openly appeared to contest the election with Mr. Taylor, and although there is time enough for such an event to happen, the prophecies are that there will be no opposition. Mr. Taylor said, however, as he was in the field, he should go in to win and would rot be caught napping.

NEW FIRM.

Emanuel Janelle, formerly connected with one of the largest baking establishments in Auburn, Me., and who is a cousin of J. L. Janelle, of Lexington, has purchased N. J. Hardy's interest in the baking, catering and restaurant firm of N. J. Hardy & Co., Hunt building, Lexington Centre, and the name of the firm will henceforth be known as J. L. Janelle & Co. Messrs. J. L. Janelle & Co. will conduct the business much on the same lines as it has been carried on during the past few days and make light catering a special feature. Especial attention will be given the ice cream department, and the quality of goods produced in this as in the fancy and staple lines of baked goods, will be maintained as under the former management. The restaurant will continue also as a foremost feature of the business. J. L. Janelle was in Mr. Hardy's employ for ten years and for over a year was his partner in the Lexington business. He is a thorough business man, oblaging and has a host of friends. With his new partner he will be fully reinforced in the general conduction of the various lines of their trade and the two make a team that will be hard to beat in any respect.

Miss Elmira Marcotte, formerly with the old firm, is to continue in charge of the salesroom, a fact which her many friends will be glad to know, Miss Goldie Bowers, also of the salesroom and an attendant in the restaurant, will also remain with the new proprietors. See advertisement.

STEALING IMPOSSIBLE?

Here is a method that will cut off some of this stealing by the tax collectors and town treasurers, we believe, if it is put actually into practice. Let the legislature divorce the two positions. Set up a statute that provides that a town shall not recognize or make good the receipt of a tax-collector unless the receipt is countersigned by the town treasurer, or some properly qualified deputy within 30 days of the date. Let the treasurer enter on his records the name and amount on receipt just countersigned, Add to this a demand for duplicate receipts from the treasurer for all money paid in to him from the town and another receipt from the collector to the selectmen. These, working together, would establish a combination book-keeping check on loose methods that ought to cut off a good many of them, if it does not stop them altogether. [Boston Record.]

A RARE OPPORTUNITY. The oportunity which is afforded by Miss E. L. Baker, of 18 Hillside avenue, Arlington Heights, to all those who desire to receive musical instruction, is one which has been afforded to but few people in this section heretofore. The instruction is given by the popular Fletcher method which has proven so satisfactory wherever it has been taught. In Somerville where Miss Baker has had classes receiving musical instruction by In Somerville where Miss Baker has had classes receiving musical instruction by this method for the past three years, she has met with marked success. She now has pupils in that city from among the oldest families there and the benefits received cannot be over-estimated. Parcits desiring to give their children musical instruction would do well to investigate the method for the fundamental training which is received is not only delightful but thorough. The ages of her pupils range from 6 to 16 years. Miss Laker is forming new classes in Somerville. Cambridge, Arlington and Arlington Heights.

OUR BIRDS AT HOME

By JAMES SPEED

II.—The English Sparrow and the Barn Swallow.

MALL wonder that city people often fail to recognize the country sparrow, for the chattering little birds in the city have very dark coats of soot over their handsome plumage, but their language and manners are very much the same as those you see every day in the crowded city streets.

How well he deserves that name, English sparrow! He is a typical Briton from the top of his jaunty little head to the tip of his claws. Brought to this country a comparatively short time ago, he was cared for with great solicitude in Central park, New York city, but he soon launched out for himself like a true Anglo-Saxon. Wherever he fights his way, there he remains. He not only remains, but adapts himself to any and all conditions. He is a fighter who hardly knows what defeat means, for if he cannot whip his opponent single handed he will promptly get re-enforcements until victory is his. Since he took out his naturalization papers in Central park he has spread over the whole of the United States.

We have no other bird which shows such a wonderful amount of ingenuity and diversity in its nest building. Most birds use certain localities for nesting places and never build a nest elsewhere. Take, for example, the barn swallow. We always find his nest on the rafters of our barns. Not so the sparrow. He has an eye first for ease in construction and next for security. The beavy foliage of the red cedar in my front yard in the country contains several nests. The stiff foliage makes the loosely built nests ride securely in the heaviest winds. Then a knothole in the side of a building is often used as a door to a whole suit of nests in the walls. He will use an old deserted woodpecker's hole in a dead tree, a martin box or any cavity for a nesting place. The ironwork of great bridges, which constantly tremble with heavy traffic. often cradles the young. I have seen these same busybodies building their nests in the crevices of a rough stone pier. Not long ago as I passed a large straw rick I saw several sparrows fly away from its side. On investigation I found that they had concluded to utilize it as a large apartment house. All along the south side of this rick there were small holes which were hollowed out into nests after they had penetrated the straw about six inches. Had the birds now followed their instinct blindly they would have carried material and built a regular nest in the cavity, but they used their little brains and simply placed a few soft feathers in each cavity to make a soft bed for their fragile eggs.

Two or three broads are reared each season by the same pair. The eggs are four or five in number. The same nest is often used season after season, being constantly repaired even in winter when it becomes necessary.

In the country by the middle of June the young birds congregate in flocks of from twenty-five to a hundred. These flocks do some damage to the wheatfields, as the grain is still soft, and they find it extremely palatable. After the wheat has been cut and is standing in the shock they still do some damage to the cap bundles. Sorghum and broom corn seed also suffer from their depredation.

Although he is spread over the country, you never find him in the woods or in the fields far from the farm houses or stables. He always keeps in touch with civilization and evidently finds there his best development. To be sure, along traveled roads you may find him some distance from houses, but walk on either side of the road for a quarter of a mile and he is not to be seen or heard. The English sparrow has no song, and he evidently knows his lack, as he never tres to sing.

As tender green outlines the dark branches which have grown rough with vinter storms a glad twitter comes floating down from high in air, and we know spring is here, for the barn swallows have returned. What memories of happy childbood that soft, low twittering brings to mind! Just his contented little twittering song as he sits preening a wing on the top of the barn roof makes memory's dark curtain roll back and happy childish voices come ringing from the past. The present is lost, and the old high timbered loft with its sweet scent of hay, the sounds of the horses below contentedly munching their feed, the low cooing of the pigeons on the rafters overhead and the sound of childish laughter all come surging back through memory's dark hall. Voices long since quiet come back clear and bright as they were wont. The swallow on the roof ceases his twittering, and the heavy curtain drops again, the voices are hushed, and the bright sun of today shines again.

Look at this little bird as he flies! No, not as he flies; as he cuts the air and floats upon it. He never appears to fly, for he merely seems to open and shut his long pointed wings, and he rises and falls and floats on the ocean of air as light as thistledown. As he pursues his tiny prey he seems to be moving about in the air for the mere pleasure which his light movement gives him.

He passes overhead, and you hear him murmuring some glad notes. We can only guess what he is saying to himself, but it sounds as if he were thinking of all the sweetest things possible to tell his mate when they set up housekeeping on the rafters in the barn. All summer long as they attend to their household duties you may hear that same low, sweet tone coming from the loft as you pass about in the stable below. If this same twittering is so pleasing to our dense human ear, how happy it must make his dainty mate to have him saying constantly the same sweet thing which first won her! I often watch these little birds and wonder how they know just what mud to select so that the nest can be built firm and strong, as it sticks fast to the side of some rafter. This rough mud cup would not do for their delicate eggs, so a few bits of hay or straw are introduced in the bottom to give shape to the feathers used for the bed for the eggs. How careful the mother bird is as she places and replaces the downy chicken feathers which she uses for the cradle proper! After she has placed a goodly number of feathers in the nest she will get in and settle herself as she would during incubation, to see if it is just as comfortable as she would wish. She turns round and round to try it in all positions. Then, finding it not what she wishes, she tries another arrangement of the feathers. Thus she works, arranging and rearranging until it just fills her idea of what home should be. While she is thus busying herself her mate sits near at hand on the roof plate offering encouragement and suggestions in low twitterings, with his head first on one side and then on the other. As I see nature from day to day, from week to week and year to year the more I am impressed with the feeling that all nature has mind or something which is very close kin to what we know as mind. I find from the authorities that these birds originally built their nests in hollow trees or under cliffs or other protected places. When man built barns, they immediately found how much better they were for protection, and now they use them almost exclusively. I notice that, although these birds place their nests either upon the flat top of the roof plate where the rafters join or upon the vertical side of the rafter, they invariably place it in a high, secure position. There is a great difference in the construction of these two varieties of nests. The one on the roof plate is an open, shallow cup, such as a robin might build; the other is fastened to the vertical side of the rafter and is built very solidly and rather long to give it greater strength.

There is only one other bird with which this swallow can be confounded, and that is the eave swallow. His coloring is very similar, but the barn swallow's tail is very much longer than that of the eave swallow and is also deeply forked, while that of the eave swallow is nearly square.

The back and all the upper fur cases of the barn swallow are deep steel blue, with a metallic luster. The under parts are rufous. The forehead also has a rufous spot. The young birds are similar in their coloring, only the colors are less bright.

LUKE DOLLIVER'S

By ANNIE H. DONNELL

No one had held an umbrella over her for so long! She glanced up in mazement, bordering on fright. He

"You're such a little mite of a woman, an' it's rainin' pitchforks!" the man said cheerily.

"I didn't have any umbrella handy," she said shyly. The last word was appended to shield her poverty, but her cotton gloves and shiny seamed jacket gave it the lie.

"Umbrellas are slippery things, wet "When you want 'em, they ain't there!"

It was a wind driven rain, and he lowered the umbrella on her side to ward off the great slanting drops. She felt a novel sensation of being sheltered, and a sob rose in her throat. Once she slipped, and he caught her arm. She had slipped so many times before, but no one had tried to save her. That was why she straightened her slender

SHE HAD NEVER CALLED HIM LUKE BEFORE. figure to its utmost and swung along beside him importantly. She thought them and openly jeered. She nudged passersby must look at her with respect.

One wet block and half of another they traversed before either spoke again. Then it was the man. "I'd ought to introduce myself, I

"I'm Faith Pettie," was the response.

"Faith. That's a nice soundin' name," he murmured.

Faith looked shyly. "I've always thought it dreadfully old fashioned, but I didn't mind because it was grandmother's name." "Then you've got folks, eh? Why, I shouldn't know how that felt."

"I did have. I haven't any now. Thère aren't any left."

The catch in her low voice seemed to trouble Luke. He changed the topic. "What d'you say your last name was,

"Pettle-Falth Pettle," she answered. He was looking down kindly into her small, pale, but rather sweet face.

"H'm! I reckon they forgot to put the 'r' in it." "What 'r?' " Her puzzled innocence made him laugh in a big, healthy way. Faith laughed, too, involuntarily. They her bread alone! The thought set his were passing a long row of tenements that toed the pavement in dreamy succession. Faith stopped before one midway in the row.

"This ain't your home, is it?" the big man asked, eying the structure with evident disfavor.

"No; it's where I stop," Faith answered quietly, conscious that she blushed under his frank gaze. It was lines. He was fighting a sharp battle. a graceless house, and she wished that her room was in front, so he could see the pot of red geraniums and the white curtain which helped out some.

At the front door they both stopped, and Faith looked up at him shyly. "I'm ever so much obliged, Mr.-Mr."

"Dolliver, Dolliver; but you just say 'Luke.' I work down at Weymouth's factory. Everybody calls me Luke."

He held the umbrella above her carefully till she mounted the steps and stood in the slit of a doorway. Then he closed it promptly.

"Well, I declare if it ain't stopped rainin'!" he cried. "Now, when did that happen?"

In the spring twilights which followed, these two workers met, at first as if by chance and then as if by mutual attraction. They loitered on their way home from work, and the girl grew less lonely, while the man came to count on throwing aside his troubles for the short time they walked together. Moreover, he became ambitious to make her smile in return. The rare occasions when he suggested that they pass beyond the tenement and sit on the benches in the promenade and watch the sunset on the water Faith marked as red letter days on her calendar. It did not occur to honest, big Luke Dolliver that danger lurked in these quiet moments. The mite of a woman who sat beside him looked happy-he liked to make her quiet face brighten. Nor did it occur to Faith that she loved him-she was simply content when he graduated his great pace to hers or talked quietly to her on the promenade. She told him frankly of her early country life, the death of the folks and her efforts to earn her live lihood in the great city, but Luke Dol liver never spoke of his past. Her life, and a wiry beard.

Spring crept into summer before they knew it, and they began to watch the gay boat parties from the promenade. 'I never was out on the water in my life," Faith said idly one evening. 'And I never really 'holidayed.' I don't call days off 'holidaying,' do you?"

"My fix, too," answered Luke. "Days off ain't the right kind. We'd ought to try our hand at the genuine article, eh ?"

"There's going to be an excursion lown the river next Saturday. I heard the girls talking about it at noon. They're going. There's to be a band

Three days till Saturday! Faith lived in a quiver of anticipation. She sat up late each night furbishing her clothes, even to the ribbons on her sailor hat, which really looked better when they were turned.

Saturday's skies could not have been bluer or the air cooler and sweeter. Faith met the day with such a radiant face that Luke Dolliver regarded her with astonished satisfaction. He had never noticed before how blue her eyes were in their white setting nor how the elusive dimples played at hide and seek in her small round chin.

"You little mite of a one," he cried gleefully, "what you been doin' to yourself? I'd ought to have put on my white duck trousers an' boiled shirt!"

For reply Faith stood on tiptoe and pinned a tiny bunch of pinks on the lapel of his coarse brown coat. Her fingers shook with excitement, and an expression of pain contracted Luke Dolliver's face. He looked about him uneasily. Yes, he would leave herthere among the pleasure seekers. He could make some excuse. She would not mind, and he'd leave the ticket and go and never come back.

These thoughts tormented Luke as they went on-the sudden consciousness that he was wronging the girl in sharing the day's pleasure with her. He had meant it to be only a bright spot in her dull life. Now he suddenly recalled the barrier that separated him worldwide from Faith.

The stream of people bound for the wharf thickened. A showily dressed woman between two men stared at her companion, and the three burst into loud laughter.

"Hold on, little mite of a one. Don't hurry so," Luke muttered, shutting an oath behind his teeth. "There's a-plenty of time." He could not bear to have guess," he said awkwardly. "I'm Luke Faith see the impudent, handsome face. He had not seen it himself for many a day.

"No, no; we must hurry! Oh, Luke, if we should be late!" cried Faith anxiously.

She had never called him Luke before. His half formed purpose to turn back vanished.

Hours later on the homeward trip he discovered that Faith loved him. They were sitting alone in a corner of the deck, and he read it clearly in her pure upturned face. To draw her close and hold her so forever! How easy a thing it would be! And what did all the rest of the world matter?

He saw how thin her arm was where the lace fell away, the peak of her chin and the hollows in her temples. How frail and slight she was to earn pulses beating mutinously.

"Lord have mercy! Lord have mercv!" his soul prayed for him.

The steamer neared its landing place and the shrill voiced throng crowded toward the gangplank. The man and girl were in a zone of silence. He was eying the shore line, creeping nearer and mearer, with his lips set to grim He had given himself .ill the steamer touched shore to reach a decision.

The ribbon of blue water narrowed. Now it was a thread.

"Who's going to wait? Here, boys, take hold of hands-Now, one, two, three-jump!

Luke Dolliver recognized the gay, reckless voice. It had made the discord of his whole life. Should he let

A cry of horror and a woman's shriek of pain rose simultaneously. Faith started to her feet, white and shaking. "Oh, Luke, what is it?" she cried. He pushed her back on the seat firm-

"It ain't anything much. You set right here an' wait for me." He plowed his way to the boat's edge and took one look at the three crushed bodies. The woman's bold, handsome face was turned upward and the refining touch of death lay on it. A little later Luke went back to Faith, and his face, softened and grave, was the face of a free man. Yet if only he were sure he had decided that question before the accident happened! Yet could he have decided it wrongly? "You poor little mite of a one," he cried tenderly, "you look scared to death! It's all over. Three people got hurt, but they're-better now." She was clinging nervously to his strong arm, and her teeth chattered. He stooped and kissed her gently. "You little mite of a one," he cried. "You ain't any bigger'n a baby. I'm going to take care of you the rest of your life!"

LESSON V, FIRST QUARTER, INTER-NATIONAL SERIES, FEB. 2.

Text of the Lesson, Acts iv. 1-22. Memory Verses, 8-10-Golden Text, Acts iv, 12-Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1901, by American Press Association.] 1, 2. "They preached through Jesus the resurrection from the dead." It was this that they taught the people as they preached unto them repentance and remission of sins through Jesus Christ. It is not at death that the believer enters into the fullness of the benefits of redemption, but at the resurrection, for, although absent from the body and present with the Lord is a gain, and very far better, yet until the company of called out ones is completed, whether they are in heaven or on earth, all are waiting until Jesus shall come again; for that event will bring the resurrection of the just, not a resurrection of all the dead, but a resurrection of the righteous from among the rest of the dead, like the resurrection of Christ and of those saints who rose after Him (Matt. xxvii, 52, 53; Rev. xx, 5, 6).

4. For their faithfulness to Christ and His doctrine Peter and John find themselves in prison; but, while they were for a time bound, they could rejoice that the word of God was not bound, and we rejoice to read that many who heard believed, and the number of the men was about 5,000. What a grand gathering from Israel to the glory of Israel's Messiah, for the gospel was not yet preacht to the gentiles (chapter xi, 19). This great result was the work not of the apostles, but of Him who when on earth said on one occasion, "Give ye them to eat," and then used the apostles to feed the 5,000 with bread which He had provided.

5-7. "By what power or by what name have ye done this?" They asked Christ a similar question at one time (Matt. xxi, 23), but not for any good reason. some people today, they could not tolerate anything that did not proceed from themselves. But we must remember that all that is not of God shall come to naught (Isa. viii, 9, 10).

8-10. It thrills one to hear Peter declare to these rulers of the people that this work was wrought by Jesus of Nazareth, whom they had crucified, but whom God had raised from the dead. He knew that these men could kill him as they had killed Jesus, but he had no fear, for he was filled with the Spirit. It was a good deed which had been done to an impotent man, and it had been wrought by Him whom they delighted to own as Lord and Master, and they were His to be, His witnesses, and to die for Him if need be. In the latter part of this story (verses 29-31) they do not ask to be delivered from further persecution, but only that they may have boldness to speak His word and power to honor His name.

11, 12. "This is the stone which was set at naught of you builders." Read here Gen. xlix, 24; Isa, viii, 14; xxviii, 16; Ps. cxviii, 22; Zech. iii, 9; iv, 7; I Pet. ii, 4-8, and see what a fruitful simile you have in this stone which so wondrously speaks of Christ. Read also Dan. ii, 44, 45, and be sure that you are in the Rock and drinking from it (Ex. xxxiii, 22; Isa. xxvi, 4, margin; I Cor. x, There is no other foundation and no other salvation (I Cor. iii, 11; Isa. xlv, They were familiar with the words "God is my salvation" (Isa. xii, 2; Ex. xv, 2; Ps. cxviii, 14), but they (these rulers) would not accept Jesus as God. They were ignorant of God's righteousness and going about to establish their own, which in God's sight was only filthy rags (Rom. x, 4; Isa. xliv, 6).

13, 14. "They took knowledge of them that they had been with Jesus." Like their Master, they had not been taught in the schools. They had not the wisdom of man, but they had wisdom and power ld not give then power of Christ manifest in us is the strongest kind of preaching, and when they saw it not only in the apostles, but in this poor, helpless beggar, they could say nothing against, though in their hearts they hated it, for they were but carnal, and the carnal mind is enmity against God. Paul so coveted the power Christ that He would glory in infirmities if only the power of Christ might rest upon him (II Cor. xii, 9).

"What shall we do to these men?" Having sent the apostles aside, they confer among themselves as a council on this to them important matter, and they determine that any more of such work as the healing of this impotent man in the name of Jesus must not be tolerated. Why do they imagine a vain thing and take counsel against the Lord? He that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh. The Lord shall have them in derision (Ps. ii, 1-4). Their counsel is vain, their purposes against the Lord shall surely be frustrated, for "every purpose of the Lord shall be performed" (Jer. li, 29; see also Isa. xiv, 24). Think of mortal man determining that the work of the Lord God Almighty shall spread no far-ther! How plainly visible is the one behind the scene, the devil, who would, if he could, dethrone God, and who will before his final overthrow gather the nations against God (Rev. xix, 19).

18-20. "We cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard." This is their reply to the command not to speak at all nor teach in the name of Jesus, and this command was from the foremost religious people of the day, with the high priest at their head, whose lips should keep knowledge and who ought to have been the messenger of the Lord of Hosts (Mal. ii, 7). Let any one now preach the whole truth concerning the second coming of Christ, the resurrection of the righteous, the restoration of Israel, no kingdom till Jesus comes, etc., and he will not fail to find prominent religious rulers who will if possible stop that kind of teaching.

21, 22. With some further threatening they were let go without punishment because the people were all glorifying God for that which was done. So they went to their own company of believers and told all that the chief priests and elders had said unto them, and with one accord they lifted up their voices to God, the creator of all things, and told Him all and left it with Him, asking only for boldness to speak His word and that through them He would hopor His name. The -Lord's answer was to shake the place and fill them again with His Spirit and cause them to speak boldly, as they had desired (verses 23 to 31). Believing that they were on earth for God, they feared not the face of man. Like Abram, who, being blessed by the Most High God, possessor of heaven and earth, he wanted no favors of the king of Sodom; like Zerubbabel, who feared not the adversaries and took no help from them (Gen. xiv, 22, 23; Ex. iv, 1-3).

NEW FANCY WORK.

DECORATIVE DARNING ON LINEN IS EASY AND EFFECTIVE.

Real Linen Huck Toweling and the Best Sik Floss Are the Materials. The Darmed Huck Is Suitable For Cushions, Doilles and Scarfs.

The new and most attractive darning executed with Roman floss on linen huck is a form of fancy work which will appeal to those who do not wish to tax their eyesight and who wish to produce articles that, in spite of their daintiness, will stand considerable hard usage. The cost of the materials is comparatively slight, and, as nearly all the floss used in the darning appears on the right side, the working method will commend itself to the economical, says The Designer in furnishing the following details of the work: The darned huck is suitable for sofa

rean or sideboard scarfs, and the designs employed are conventionalized flowers, leaves and scrolls. The first illustration shows clearly the mode of working. Only the upper threads of the weave are caught up by the needle, which should be blunt at the tip, short and have a long eye that will carry the floss without fraying it. This darning may be done with one shade of the silk, or a second shade may be carried diagonally across the first. The darned portion forms a background for the conventional design. making it stand out in pure white against the dark ground made by the floss. The leaves, scrolls, etc., are outlined with Kensington or stem stitch and are veined with featherstitch.

The darned buck when intended for a pillow cover may be finished by a deep ruffle of the huck featherstitched with the various shades of floss used in working the cushion top. The centerpieces are worked about the edge in buttonholed scallops, white Caspian floss being usually employed for this part of the work. The cushion top shown in the second cut is worked in different shades of red and requires thirty-two skeins.

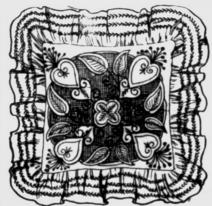

As the floss used for working should be of fast color, the cushion tops, doilies or scarfs may be laundered as readily as a linen towel, although it goes without saying that strong soap or chemicals of any kind should never be employed, and it is better to dry the articles in the shade instead of sunlight. They should also be ironed on the wrong side on a padded ironing board, which will raise the pattern.

The scallops of the doilies or the centerpieces are cut out after they are worked and will appear much handsomer if they are padded before being with any save the best floss.

If preferred, the cushions may be completed by a heavy linen cord or with a wide ribbon ruffle instead of with the huck ruffles. Either the cord or the ribbon must be removed. of course, when the top requires laundering. Ribbon of about two inches in width of the same shades as those of the floss may be featherstitched together for a ruffle instead of the huck, or three ruffles of ribbon four or five inches in width placed one over the other make a very handsome finish. The back of the pillow may be made of the plain huck or of denim or linen the color of one of the shades of floss used. The colored back is preferred by many, as the plain white buck shows the slightest dust mark.

The huck pillows are suitable for the city bedroom or sitting room, but for summer time make delightful hammock or porch cushions, as they are durable and pretty and can be renovated for merely the cost of soap and water. For the hammock or the porch the huck ruffles or the cable cord of linen should be used to finish the cush-

Bureau or sideboard scarfs of the huck have darned borders or merely darned ends and are finished with featherstiched or hemstitched hems of any preferred width or else with a CAUTION TO PERSONS HAVING scallop.

position are chaperoned here. Age doesn't matter. They are spinstersthat's enough. No tender maid of thirty goes unattended in California. No single woman of any age goes to the theater alone with a man, and, as for "buggy riding," the custom is unknown. No girl goes to a restaurant for lunch with a youth she has known from the cradle. It would not be correct, and it would not be entirely correct, either, for her to get another girl. No; she must have the chaperon-the tried and seasoned veteran of matrimony-or else the proprieties will be split up the back.

The ardor with which the cult of the chaperon has been taken up in the west should make the thoughtful pause. Egypt's Veiled Women.

The tasmak, or veil, may be black or white, long or short, plain or embellished with rows of drawnwork or tucks and of any sort of fine, soft material. The women of the middle and lower classes wear for the most part black veils from one to three feet long. Those higher in the social grade wear white ones, and occasionally they reach to the hem of the dress. These are held in place by a metal tube that is fastened over the nose and lower part of the forehead by cords securely tied behind. When worn with this habara in the orthodox fashion, there is nothing visible but the woman's bright black eyes, which see everything going on. The tasmak and habara are capital disguises, and a woman may flirt to her heart's content without fear of followed to her home. - Philadelphia Bulletin.

The shades of the goose and the turkey were discussing the circumstances which had attended their respective takings off.

"Did you offer any objection when first the cruel farmer laid hands on you?" sympathetically inquired the gobbler

"Yes," replied his gooseship; "I cried out, 'Hello, what's this?' "

"What did you say next?" inquired the now thoroughly interested fowl. "Oh," the goose replied, "I did not say anything more. Just then I was

It is said the powdered borax will take grease spots out of woolen goods better than anything else that can be used on short notice. Spread the skirt out with the spot over a smooth place on the table and rub the borax into it with the fingers, allowing it to remain a few minutes, then brush off with a whiskbroom. Do this two or three times or till the spot disappears, and your skirt is ready to wear.

If the cover of the kettle is lifted, the boiling water seems to be covered by a cloud of white steam, but this cloud did not exist before the cover was raised. It has been formed by the sudden cooling of the vapor. In a glass boiler which is either completely sealed or provided with only a narrow outlet for the vapor the space above the water is perfectly transparent and apparently empty.

AN ITEM IN COOKERY.

Sauces That Give Piquancy to Some Overfamiliar Dishes,

A knowledge of sauces and how to make them enables the housekeeper to serve many dishes more appetizingly, to use cheaper cuts of meat, to utilize cold remnants and ring in various acceptable changes on the customary menus. Following are just a few use ful hints on their preparation:

Drawn butter sauce is the foundation of hollandaise, caper and piquante sauces. For drawn butter sauce the proportions are three tablespoonfuls of butter, two of flour and one cupful of water, with pepper and salt to season.

For hollandaise sauce add the mashed yolk of one egg, one teaspoonful of onion juice, one teaspoonful of fively chopped parsley and one-half teaspoonful of grated onion. This is used for fish or meat. Caper sauce for boiled mutton is drawn butter sauce, with two teaspoonfuls of capers and one tablespoonful of lemon juice stirred in after the sauce is cooked. For sauce piquante add to the drawn butter sauce one-half tablespoonful of vinegar, one-half tablespoonful of onion juice, one tablespoonful of chopped pickles, one tablespoonful of chopped capers, one-half tablespoonful of chopped olives, one-quarter teaspoonful of grated onion and a dash of paprika. Mint sauce is the orthodox accompaniment for roast lamb, and for it fresh young mint leaves should be used. Pick the best leaves from the stems until there are two tablespoonfuls and chop them very fine. Mix these with two and a half tablespoonfuls of sugar, four tablespoonfuls of vinegar and a half saltspoonful of salt and let them stand several hours before serving. Horseradish sauce can be made and kept indefinitely in tight jars. To a cupful of the grated root add six tablespoonfuls of vinegar and a scant teaspoonful of salt. This is liked with hot or cold roast meats and with beefsteak.

Sauce tartare for fried or broiled meats and fish, particularly the latter, is mayonnaise dressing seasoned with relishes. To a cupful of dressing add a tablespoonful of chopped pickles or olives, a tablespoonful of capers and a teaspoonful of onion juice.

MILLINERY MODES.

White Lace or Tulle the Fashion of the Moment For Evening Wear.

So attractive are the models, so becoming the different shapes of hats, says the New York Herald in illustrat ing a number of them, that womes think money is well invested in headgear. There are flat hats to be worn forward over the face, picture hats with the brim turned up at the side, hats covered with feathers and hats made of feathers.

For evening wear the fashion of the moment is the white lace hat or th white tulle, with a decided preference in favor of the lace as being the most expensive. Irish point, old English point and brussels point laces are all used, but the Irish point lace hats are rather the smartest. In the white tulle the fad is to have plaitings of tulle sewed round and round upon a flat frame, the brim turned up all around, faced with a rough fuzzy material that looks like wool, and this embroidered with pearls or gold beads or with silver. It is very effective, and the hat is almost always becoming. Cream For the Face.

When the wind is cold, the following cream lightly rubbed on the face before going out acts as a protection; Cocoa butter, two ounces; lanoline, two ounces; rosewater, two and a half ounces; elder flower water, one and a half ounces. This cream should be washed off upon coming in.

Fashion's Echoes.

For girls' school dresses suitable materials are serges, friezes, cheviots and velveteens. Stitched bands are the best sort of trimming, but the less the better.

Cold weather in general, and this KIND of cold weather in particular-fifty degrees above today and ten degrees above tomorrow-is very trying on the skin. To many persons these annoyances are very discomforting and are often classed with the disturbing toothache. Though not so bad. still chapped and reddened hands and face and cracked lips do not in any way contribute to anyone's happiness-not in the least. As a matter of fact, though, these affections may easily be removed by the use of proper remedies; and it is to suggest some of these remedies that we have made a careful examination of our Toilet Department, the result of which is below appended.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

Hal Reid's "At Cripple Creek," which will be next week's attraction at the Grand Opera house, is in every sense an idyl of the Rocky mountains. It is a simple story of western life, told in its author's best style, and is a dramatic gem of great power and beauty. Its pathos moves the heart with its tender emotion, and there are a number of amusing comedy scenes interspersed through the play that serve to brighten the intense situations upon which the drama is founded. The types of character are true to the locality—the rearing spoles of Colorado's lofty peaks. Its men and women move in an atmosphere of true nobility—the nobility of honest of true nobility—the nobility of honest purpose courage and sympathy.

CHILDREN'S THEATRE.

CHILDREN'S THEATRE.

The last two performances of that delightful children's opera, "The Magic Fiddle," at the Children's theatre, 30 Huntington avenue, Boston, will be given on Saturdays, Feb. 1 and Feb. 8. Both at 230 o'clock. This little play seems to be just the kind the children like. It is not a mere group of pleasing specialties, more or less carefully woven together, but is a real play in every sense. It has just enough plot to make it interesting to the little people, it is not too intricate for them to follow and because everything is not spelled out, so to speak, it piques their natural curiosity and makes them attentive to all that is going on before them. The funny little elves and pretty fairles make their appearance in the very first part of the play, and in a little ballet show the audience that they are real and so the story-book tales must be true.

VERMUNT'S DEER LAW.

VERMUNI'S DIER LAW.

(From the Boston Transcript.)

Nature has a good constitution and that highly desirable quality which the doctor likes to find in a critical case-great recuperative power. Hunt the deer of vermont to the very verge of extermination, then give nature a convalescent breathing spell, a close season for twenty years, and by the end of the period you have letters like this—a verbatim instance—coming in to the state game commission: "Dear Sir—The deer game commission: "Dear Sir—The deer nave damaged my crops to the extent of $55. Please call and settle or you will hear further. Yours truly.—."

Vermont protected its deer absolutely Vermont protected its deer absolutely for twenty years, until 1898. Now an open season is permitted, the last ten days in October. In 1898, 131 deer were reported to the game commission as killed; in 1899, 89; in 1900, 127. During the season of last year 196 were killed, the bulk of the trophies being secured in the season of last year 196 were killed, the bulk of the trophies being secured in Rutland and Windsor countles, 54 in the former and 64 in the latter. The biggest trophy, weighing 366 pounds and measuring 8 feet 3 inches from tip to t.p., was shot in the town of Mt. Tabor. Rutland county.

Vermont seems to have that rare and desirable statute, a satisfactory deer law. Under it, those who know best say the animals will continue to thrive and vet every sportsman will have ten fine October days to get a trophy. The only change advocated would be to give a chance to farmers to kill a deer later in the season when the meat can be preserved better.

The greatest cause of wanton slaughter are the worthless "yaller" dogs that roam the country and are able to do much damage when the snow crust is just hard enough to support the dog but soft enough to let the deer break through and flourder. The worst of it is the does are usually heavy with young just at this period. Most of these irresponsible dogs are homeless, but some belong to responsible owners who should be made to bear the punishment of their responsibility. Much could be done by a law permitting the shooting by any person of any dog seen chasing a deer. With such a statute to justify them the friends of the deer could do much to reduce the breed of dogs of which "veilow" is no description at all, but which "yaller," for some occult reason, seems to describe perfectly. perfectly.

UNSPORTSMANLIKE SLAUGHTER;
Shooting pigeons from traps ought to be made illegal in every state. There is nothing manly or sportsmanlike in it. The nearest approach to it is the royal hunt in Europe, where poor, timid game and animals are driven up to be ruthlessly slaughtered by royalty at short range. There is no attempt at resistance, no effort to get away. A beef in the shambles is not more helpless. It is an element of sport that the game shall have a chance, and the more difficult the pursuit and the more ingenious the game in avoiding an enemy, the higher is the sport. This element is entirely absent from traps pigeon shooting. The pigeon is thrown into the air in utter confusion, and before he can gather his wits together for flight he is either killed or cruelly wounded. One of the strongest reasons for the condemnation of the practice is its utter uselessness, even from the standpoint of the trap shot. Clay pigeons answer every purpose. They can be hurled from the trap in the same way and are as difficult to break. The sentiment of the public revolts at this slaughter, and it is to be hoped that not only in New York, but in other states, a stop will be put to it. UNSPORTSMANLIKE SLAUGHTER
